JUNE 18, 2009

Bowling Green, KY Carroll Knicely Conference Center

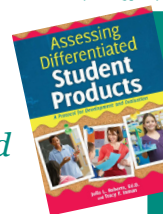

THE POWER OF PRODUCTS

with DR. JULIA LINK ROBERTS and MS. TRACY INMAN,
The Center for Gifted Studies, Western Kentucky University

Co-authors of "Strategies for Differentiating Instruction" &
"Assessing Differentiated Student Products: A Protocol for Development and Evaluation"

How do you engage students in high level learning? One powerful (yet easy!) way is to vary products. How, then, do you authentically assess those multiple products without losing your mind? Use a protocol, a standard that ensures ease, consistency, and clarity. The Developing and Assessing Product (DAP) Tool simplifies the assessment process, guides students in product development, encourages differentiation, and takes the ceiling off learning. With consistent components and vocabulary, innovative scale, and varying tiers with different levels of expectation based on student preassessment, the DAP Tool may just be the answer you're looking for.
