

2009 Summer Workshops

sponsored by the School of Journalism & Broadcasting

Xposure Journalism Workshop

June 7th - 18th

For 25 years, students from throughout Kentucky and the region have come to learn and do journalism at Western Kentucky University's Xposure Journalism Workshop.

These students have shown an interest in journalism and came to the workshops with backgrounds under-represented in U.S. newsrooms. Some lacked the financial resources to attend journalism workshops.

The 2009 Xposure High School Journalism Workshop — June 7-18 — hosted by the School of Journalism & Broadcasting at WKU will continue that tradition. The alumni of these workshops fill newsrooms throughout the country, helping to ensure that the news gatherers at media outlets mirror the diverse communities they serve.

For more information contact workshop director, Bob Adams at robert.adams@wku.edu.

High School Summer Media Workshops

June 14th - 18th

From on-line to on-air and so much more.

The 7th annual High School Media workshops offer two, four or six-days of training in photography, broadcasting, InDesign, Photoshop and newspaper writing.

Designed to challenge and motivate students this annual workshop is sponsored by the Kentucky High School Media Institute and the School of Journalism & Broadcasting.

For more information contact the School of Journalism & Broadcasting at 270-745-4144.

enVision

June 21st - 25th

Each summer, an elite group of students are chosen from across the country for five days of intense instruction at Western Kentucky University's nationally acclaimed photojournalism program.

If you are interested in an experience that could set in motion your career path in photojournalism, please contact James H. Kenney, enVision director, at james.kenney@wku.edu.
