

What You Can Expect from your Tutoring Experience.

- The time working with the tutor will be an active experience. The tutor will work with you not for you.
- You can expect your tutor to know the basic concepts you are studying, but the tutor may not have been assigned the same books or had the same professor as you. You can expect, for instance, that your Math tutor will be able to explain the quadratic equation, but you can't expect that your writing tutor will have read the same essay that your particular instructor assigned. You cannot expect that your tutor will know the answer to every question.
- The tutors can help you work through problems with your homework, but the tutor will not do your homework for you. So, the tutor will do a sample problem for you, explaining the steps that you should use in your own work, but the tutor will not do your actual homework problem. The tutor will guide you through the homework problem, prompting you what step comes next or when you've made a mistake, but the tutor will not do the problem for you. The tutor will not debug your program for you, but will help you to find your errors.
- The tutor will help you to understand the course material so that you can feel more comfortable joining the class discussions. By talking through the concepts and clarifying your ideas with the tutor, you can be more certain that you understand the material.
- The tutor will not help you with an out-of-class quiz or test. Professors expect that you will do these assignments independently. The tutor will not violate the Honor Code to help you with this type of assignment.
