Students in the Honors College at WKU have been getting into the holiday spirit by giving back during the first Honors College Week of Thanks. This weeklong activity, Nov. 28 to Dec. 2, allows all students to take a few moments and say thank you to someone who has made an impact on their life while making an impact on another’s.

Throughout the week, students have been participating in three main activities.

- Drop a Note, Change a Day: Each day, students have been writing quick thank you notes to individuals who has recently helped or supported them in some way. Drop off locations are Minton Hall, Bates-Runner Hall, McLean Hall, and at the Honors College. Toward the end of each day the notes will be delivered to the on-campus recipients.

- Food Bank Drive: For the entire week, receptacles have been placed in each of the Honors residence halls and the Honors College for students to donate canned foods and other non-perishable items for the Bowling Green chapter of the Salvation Army. At the end of the week, students will travel to the Salvation Army and present the donated items to the chapter representatives.

- Honors College Letter Writing: On Wednesday students wrote letters to their former high school teachers, guidance counselors, mentors and others who have helped them grow into successful collegiate scholars. This opportunity allowed students to say “Thank You” to anyone who has made a major impact in their life.

Each of these activities allow Honors scholars to express their thanks to others in multiple ways in an effort to grow the spirit of giving on WKU’s campus.

About the Honors College at WKU: WKU is home to the only Honors College in the Commonwealth of Kentucky. Created in 2007, the Honors College at WKU provides an intimate, highly selective learning environment where college-age gifted and high-achieving students can develop the skills to prepare them for success in the nation’s top academic and career opportunities.
