Jody Richards Elementary School announced Leslie Shultz as its new principal Thursday.

Shultz, who had been the school's assistant principal since 2014, was selected for the job by the school's site-based decision-making council Wednesday evening.

Shultz replaces Stephanie Martin, who took a job at Western Kentucky University, according to Warren County Public Schools spokeswoman Morgan Watson.

Watson credited Shultz for helping create a positive culture for students at Jody Richards Elementary, describing her as part of the school's "heartbeat."

A graduate of WKU, Shultz has a special education background, with additional certifications in K-12 learning and behavior disorders and school administration, Watson said.
