Bevin appoints new WKU regent

The Associated Press Nov 23, 2019

FRANKFORT – Gov. Matt Bevin has named a new member to the Western Kentucky University Board of Regents, in addition to other appointments.

Bevin named Sheldon McKinney, executive director of the Kentucky Future Farmers of America Foundation, to the WKU board. McKinney lives in Fleming County.

After completing undergraduate work at WKU, Sheldon went on to receive of Masters of Science degree in Agriculture and Youth & Non-Profit Leadership from Murray State University, according to a news release from the governor's office.

She and her husband, Bradley, have two sons.

Bevin also announced the appointment of three of his staffers to the University of Louisville and University of Kentucky boards of trustees.

Scott Brinkman, the governor's secretary of the executive cabinet, and Bevin's state budget director, John Chilton, have been appointed to the University of Louisville's board of trustees. Brinkman is also a former state legislator from Louisville. Chilton, an accountant, is also from Louisville.

Bevin also named Bryan Sunderland, his deputy chief of staff, to the University of Kentucky's board of trustees.

Randall J. Bufford, president of Trilogy Health Services, was also named to the UofL board.
