Anita Sarkeesian is a feminist pop culture critic who produces a web series of feisty video commentaries from a feminist/fan perspective at FeministFrequency.com.

Exploring representations of race, gender, sexuality, class and ability in popular culture, she uses her riotous web show as a platform to critique the world we live in—everything from The Hunger Games and Angry Birds to Buffy, LEGOS, and Call of Duty. Anita also speaks internationally about feminist media criticism, online video production, remix video and fair use.

Co-sponsored by the Departments of English, History, Sociology, Philosophy, Political Science, Art, Folk Studies, and Popular Culture, and by Potter College of Arts and Letters, and the Rodes-Helm Lecture Series.
